DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in-

(1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effect under this subsection of a national application published under section 122(b) only if the international application designating the United States was published under Article 21(2)(a) of such treaty in the English language; or
(2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that a patent shall not be deemed filed in the United States for the purposes of this subsection based on the filing of an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a).

2. Claims 1-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Pavlovic (US 6,055,158).

Pavlovic teaches a case for dissipating heat from an electronic device, comprising:

- an electronic circuit board (14, fig. 1) (claims 1, and 5)
- a heat generating electronic component (an electronic component 18, fig. 1, also see col. 2, lines 38-39) disposed on said circuit board (claims 1, 4, 5, and 8)
- a housing (12, fig. 1) positioned about said electronic circuit board and said heat generating electronic component; said housing being made of a thermally conductive polymer material (see col. 2, lines 47-59) (claims 1-3, and 5-7)

- a protrusion (40, fig. 2) emanating from said housing (claim 5)

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 9-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Pavlovic in view of MacDonald, Jr. et al. (US 6,195,267 B1).

Pavlovic teaches a case for dissipating heat from an electronic device, comprising: an electronic circuit board (14, fig. 1) (claim 9); a heat generating electronic component (an electronic component 18, fig. 1, also see col. 2, lines 38-39) disposed on said circuit board (claims 9 and 12); a housing (12, fig. 1) positioned about said electronic circuit board and said heat generating electronic component; said housing being made of a thermally conductive polymer material (see col. 2, lines 47-59) (claims 9 and 10) as stated in paragraph 2, hereinabove. Pavlovic further teaches a heat transfer conduit (38, 40, and 42, fig. 3) molded into and through an aperture (not numbered, fig. 3) having a top surface (not numbered, fig. 3) and a bottom surface (not numbered, fig. 3) (claim 9).

Pavlovic differs from claims 9-12 in that it does not teach an EMI shield positioned on said electronic circuit board with said heat generating electronic component residing therebetween. However, MacDonald teaches an EMI shield (28, fig. 3; also see col. 3, lines 37-58). It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the device of Pavlovic with the EMI shield taught by MacDonald for the purpose of shielding the radiation.
